HE great Care and Paines which Sig.<sup>r</sup> GIO: TORRIANO hath taken in setting forth the following VVork, hath justly entitled him to a Right of making his particular Dedication thereof; which he hath done, To the Right worshipful Company of the Turkey Merchants, whereof you are a worthy Member: But the interest we have in the Copy (as from the time of our purchase of it, wee ever intended) wee here most humbly offer to YOUR SELFE.
For to whom can we more fitly present a Dictionary of a Forraigne, and especially the ITALIAN Tongue, then to Y o u, by whose favours, and ready compliyanee, at all times, with our Occasions, our affaires have had their Foundation, and are still carryed on in Forraigne Parts, but principally in T H A T C O U N T R E Y.

S I R,

SIR, This Volume would swell to too big a bulk, if this Epistle did containe but the Catalogue of the Obligations, which in the series of severall years You have heaped upon us; the sense whereof hath hitherto been confin'd within the bounds of our owne Breasts. VVe beseech you give us now leave to make publication of them to all the VVorld, and to be so just as to endeavour, that not only in ENGLAND, but in the PARTS BEYOND SEA, where your Correspondents have daily experience of our Engagements to You, there may be perpetuall Monuments of our acknowledgments of them; and that our Gratitude may travell as farr as the use of this Book will carry it. VVe confesse these are but meane returnes for so great Courtesies, but being the effects of our gratefull dispositions and respects, wee hope may finde Acceptance with you, which is onely aimed at in this DEDICATION, By

Your most Humble,

THE PREFACE.

W H E N the Rarities of Italy (that Paradise of Art and Nature, that Academy and Garden of the World) do dayly call so many of the English Nation, and Forraigners, from all parts into it, when its excellent Books do travell into all Nations and find Universall Esteem; and when all Merchants that traffique into the Levant, must Trade by that Language, it would be superfluous for me by a Studied Discourse to invite any to the Learning thereof: And the use of a Dictionary, in order to its attaining, is so obvious to all understandings, that it would be impertinent to demonstrate its necessity; I shall therefore only give the Peruser an Account, in short, of this present Edition.

In the Year 1611, JOHN FLORIO set forth a second Edition of his Italian and English Dictionary, which for Variety of Words was far more Copious then any extant in the World at that time. This, notwithstanding being defective, and other Dictionaries and Italian Authors coming to his Hands, he collected out of them an Addition of many thousand Words and Phrases, relating to Arts, Sciences, and Exercises; intending (if he had lived) a third Edition, which he left behind him in a very fair Manuscript, perfected and ready for the Presse.

This Manuscript I have diligently perused, and in very many places supplied, out of the generally approved Dictionary of the Accademici della Crusca, and severall others that have been set forth since his death. I have likewise much corrected the English Interpretations, and (where there was cause) reduced them to their genuine sense, as they are now used in these Modern Times. There wanted yet a Dictionary English and Italian, which I have compiled by my owne industry, and added to it severall Proverbs and Instructions structions for the learning of the Language ; So that I question not but now this will be the most compleat Italian-English-Dictionary that ever yet hath been published, and that all such as shall apply themselves to the Study of this Noble Tongue, will find in it all necessary helps, and expected Satisfaction. For my own part, I shall account these my Labours well employed, if they shall be accepted by the English Nation, for whose service I have spent the greatest part, of my time, and to whom I shall perpetually be,

A most Humble and devoted Servant,

GIO: TORRIANO.

An Advertisement.

Wheresoever this Asterisme * is placed before any word, it signifies, either that all such words are not to be found in M<sup>r</sup>. Florio's last Edition of his Dictionary ; or that there is an alteration and addition in their Interpretations : But these Asterismes (by over-sight) in some whole Letters, and very many places, are omitted ; Of which the Reader is desired to take notice, and to judge of the Additions in this Dictionary, as upon perusall he shall find just cause and Reason.
